He went before the jury the next morning and declared that a $32,000 verdict was unjust because the city was willing to compromise for $75,000 and had repeatedly offered to do so. The result was that he upset the whole thing and a hung jury was the result. jury was the result.

'I will send down by this afternoon's mail the papers in my motion for a new trial. The arguments on the motion will be made Friday.

"Judge Benson has been exceedingly fair and impartial in the trial but of course we think he was wrong in some of the things he said in his charge to the jury. And the skillful way in which the jury ignored the evidence in the case was remarkable. If we appeal the case to the supreme court we would expect to have it sent back to a district court for trial with some law on the subject that the jury would be bound to consideration.

While the plaintiff, the bank, is satisfied with the findings, the contractors and the city are not. The whole amount of the Onslaught on the Bo snit was for $219,000 -the bank claimed $68,000 and got it; the contractors claimed $151,000 and have been awarded about $5,000.

In regard to a new trial or a settleion of opinion among the councilmen and city officials. Some of them believe from the state penitentiary. that the city will never get a verdict less exacting; others believe that the city can reduce the amount. The facts are that while it is alleged by some that the city would owe the contractors nothing had they completed the sewers it is also admitted that the city were sentenced to serve terms of six years such for their critics. They were sewers, it is also admitted that the city council a year ago generally favored a settlement on a basis of paying about time McClain, the $40,000, but was prevailed upon to try to sent up for life. do better. It is safe to say that that had the verdict been at this figure the case would have been ended.

Those who favor a settlement on the basis of the present findings claim that out of thirty-six jurors in the three cases, all but five favored large damages against the city. The plaintiffs say they know that in the first case ten jurors favored a finding of $140,000 and twent $95,000 and that in the second about $95,000, and that in the second and got into trial nine jurors favored a finding of $150,000. The city must now decide some razors and whether it will risk additional costs and them pardoned.

another verdict. A History of the Case. The case is one in which the city was sued for $219,000.
